Why engage with the On Demand recording?

This webinar offers valuable learning for professionals working with children and young people, particularly those involved in safeguarding, exploitation, youth justice and multi-agency decision-making.

Participants' feedback suggests that the recording may be particularly useful for professionals who want to:

- Explore how children experiencing exploitation can be misunderstood when their behaviour challenges conventional ideas about victimhood.
- Reflect on how professional language and assumptions influence the way children and young people are perceived.
- Consider how children's voices and experiences are represented in multi-agency discussions.
- Question whether professional meetings and processes are achieving their intended safeguarding purpose.
- Strengthen reflective practice, professional curiosity and shared learning across agencies.

Engaging with the On Demand recording provides an opportunity to consider how professional judgements are formed and how they might be influenced by established assumptions, organisational cultures and the language used in practice.

The film offers a particularly useful starting point for discussion because it presents a recognisable professional situation without prescribing a single response.

The recording can be used for individual CPD or as a stimulus for supervision, a practice meeting or a facilitated team-learning session, and CareKnowledge's accompanying resources can help teams move from watching the recording to discussing what the issues mean for their own work.

The webinar's combination of film and reflective discussion makes this a valuable resource for examining how professional thinking, language and multi-agency practice influence the experiences of children and young people.
